

Random Mini-Tests

Matthew Smith

Senior Lecturer & Course Leader – Real Estate, Birmingham City University

Synopsis

Does the stream of late arrivals at your lectures compromise concentration? Is the lack of regular student revision punishing your progression? Is rear-ended assessment causing you mountains of marking? Then you need 'Random Mini-Tests'. What are random mini-tests? They are 5 minute mini-tests, held at the start of randomly selected lectures. They're easy to take and only have beneficial side effects. Spread the assessment over a whole module, see your exam results rise and have them in their seats before 9 a.m. Could this antidote to student apathy work for you? Make 'Random Mini-Tests' your lunch date and find out!
